TOWNSEND CLUB ORGANIZED AT NEW LENOX

The Joliet Townsend club sponsored a meeting at New Lenox on Tuesday evening at the Emile hall for the purpose of organizing a Townsend club in New Lenox. The Joliet organization has tried to form local clubs in Plainfield and Wilmington and did not meet with much success so New Lenox is really the first town in the country outside of Joliet to form a local club. The requirements are that 30 members constitute a club and no charter can be procured until 30 members have joined. There seemed to be a very live interest in the New Lenox meeting and at the close, 15 members were signed up with a prospect that the balance needed to form a club will be signed up in short order.

The following temporary officers were chosen for the New Lenox organization: Chairman, Mrs. Clara Mangun; Secretary, Mrs. Bessie Strassburg; Treasurer, Lester Mangun.

The meeting was in charge of Mrs. Hobart Harper of Joliet, Tuesday night.

Roy Webb of the National Townsend headquarters in Chicago, was the principal speaker. He delivered an excellent address pointing out how the Townsend plan movement has gained rapidly since its inception five years ago. He declared the plan embodied in the bill had been killed in committee by the National Ways and Means committee in Washington every time it has been presented in the last four years, but since that time the Townsend plan has grown so rapidly that there are now 9,600,000 members throughout the United States and seven of the Congressmen who were opposed to the Townsend plan were defeated in elections last November and their places have been taken by other Congressmen more favorable to the plan and as a result this year the Ways and Means committee has granted hearings to the proponents of the Townsend plan to present their project and Mr. Webb further pointed out that at the present time 157 Congressmen were in favor of this national movement.

Also 5,000 ministers are endorsing the plan and are organizing clubs in all sections of the United States. The speaker brought out the fact that the chief aim of the Townsend plan is to stimulate business by granting a benefit of $108 a month to elderly people over 60 years of age. He further declared that there has been a misunderstanding regarding the plan, the idea apparently being that all pensioners were to receive $200 per month.

Mr. Webb declared the Townsend plan would do three things—First, retire all citizens over 60 from gainful employment in private industry and hire them to be the spending agents.

Second, levy a federal tax of 2 percent on all monetary transactions throughout the nation, collectible monthly.

Third, prorate this tax levy among the spending agents with the stipulation to be spent within 30 days of the receipt.

The theory being there are approximately 8,000,000 Americans past 60 who can qualify. It is estimated half of them are employed and would retire under the plan and jobs would thus be thrown open to the younger workers, reducing unemployment rolls immediately by 4,000,000.

Under the forced spending clause, a tremendous revenue from the transactions tax would be returned to circulation immediately in the well spring of the nation's business—neighborhood groceries, drug stores and theatres. Dividends for all would arrive as 4,000,000 additional pay envelopes are handed to those now unemployed. Factories and mills would have to increase production to meet the demand putting more of the unemployed younger men and women to work. This would be the first result. Revolving effects of the plan would be apparent within 30 to 90 days as transactions increased, tax revenues would mount and the pro rata share of the spending agents would grow to be again spent within 30 days. Continued increase in business it is felt would reduce unemployed rolls to a minimum. Continued increase in the tax rate would add to the participant's pro rata share until a maximum of $200 each is being distributed monthly. At that time revenue beyond the limit could be used to reduce the national debt or eliminate other taxes or both. Proponents of the Townsend plan say that the Social Security Act, the 3 percent sales tax and WPA would all be eliminated after the plan gets into full operation.

Rock Island Plans Crossing Gates

This week the Rock Island rail road has men in Mokena measuring up local crossings for the electric crossing gates which the railroad is planning to install here in the near future.

PROWLER BEATS ORLAND DIVORCEE WITH BRICK

Mrs. Vivian Raschke, formerly of Orland township and who, following a recent divorce, assumed her maiden name of Vivian Walston, aged 23 years, was the victim of a prowler early Monday morning. The man invaded her room in a basement apartment at 6030 Ingleside avenue, Chicago, where Miss Walston lives with her sister Eleanor and her brother-in-law, Frank Liston. A prowler crawled through a window in the rear of the apartment opening on a sleeping porch. He walked past the bed where Mr. and Mrs. Liston were sleeping.

In the dining room he took $4.00 from Mrs. Liston's purse, then he went into the living room where Miss Walston was sleeping on a couch.

Miss Walston was awakened by the man pulling at her bed clothes. She screamed. The man hit her three times on the head with a brick. She suffered seven scalp cuts. Her screams aroused Mr. and Mrs. Liston. The man fled through the back door, vaulted a fence and disappeared. Liston chased the invader but was unable to capture him.

Bloody hand prints were found on the fence. A finger print was also found where the man crawled through the window. The brick was wrapped in a dirty handkerchief. Neither Miss Walston or Liston got a good look at the man.

Miss Walston was removed to the Woodlawn hospital. Physicians said she would recover.

The whole neighborhood was aroused by the woman's beating, as numerous prowlers were seen in that section. Police said a man snatched a woman's purse near the girl's home on Saturday night, slugged her male companion and escaped.

Miss Walston was divorced from Clifford Raschke, son of Louis C. Raschke, Justice of the Peace of Orland township recently.

She had been unemployed for some time, but was to have gone to work Tuesday as a waitress in a neighborhood restaurant. A student nurse at Albert Billings Memorial hospital, two blocks from the Liston home was seized by a man last Monday night near the hospital. She struggled and escaped from him after he took several dollars from her purse.

Head Bump Causes Neck Dislocation

Edward Walsh, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Walsh of Mokena met with a very peculiar accident Sunday evening.

While getting out of his automobile he bumped his head in some unaccountable manner. At the moment he did not think much of it. Monday morning, however, he was unable to get up or move. Dr. R. H. Carmichael of Tinley Park was called. Later in the day Edward was taken to St. Francis hospital in Blue Island, where an x-ray examination revealed the neck was almost two inches out of place due to the neck vertebra being dislocated. He has been returned home and the dislocated bones are gradually going back into place.

Three candidates were officially initiated for membership in the club.

The Episcopal Men's Club of New Lenox took in three new members last Friday night April 21. They were: Edward Walsh, Walter Baers and George Koeller. A short but impressive initiation ceremony was held which was a little tough on the candidates, but produced many laughs from the other club members. CHAPTER XVI—Continued

Cook smiled grimly. "There aren't enough tools for the same reason that there aren't half enough trails, half enough telephone sets, half enough miles of wire to protect this forest. Come right down to it, we just can't get the money. What do we count in politics anyway?"

"Like this seventy-eight dollars Slim spoke of. Now I've never been to Washington, but I reckon here's the way of it. The talk gets around to appropriations for the forest service. Maybe they see I'm asking for five hundred dollars to build trails. 'Who's this Cook?' some folks ask."

"A ranger in the Sierras." "How many votes out there?" "Six."

"Five hundred dollars for six votes? My God! So in the end I build trails on seventy-eight dollars."

Cook shrugged, adding, "Nothing against the gentlemen who hold their jobs by their votes. But they ought to see our side of it. I reckon they think we want trails to go joy-riding on, and telephones to gossip over, and tools to dig in the garden!"

In the silence that followed, Breck produced his pipe, lighted it, let it go out in his hand. A thought had come with Cook's first words. He had put it from his mind. But the letter was in his pocket. He shrugged off the feeling that it had been pressed upon him by Fate, and tried to argue within himself. Sutherland would do nothing. Yet he knew Sutherland was fair-minded. If only bringing him would not mean bringing Irene also. She did not belong here.

He felt jealous of his life; it was his own. He knew too well how she could usurp it. Again the picture of her came before his eyes; a beautiful girl, drawing him even in a vision.

"Cook," he said abruptly, "you brought a letter from down below—from a friend of mine whose father is Senator Sutherland. There's a chance that I could get them up here on a vacation. I'm not sure it would help the service, and yet he's a politician and plays the game."

"Might get down the guest books," Sierra offered, "and show him how many hundred tourists come through these parts. Then name a trail after him."

Breck laughed. "You're not so dumb, Slim! The Sutherland Trail. Sounds pretty good, doesn't it?"

Cook remained thoughtful over slow puffs from his pipe. "Son," he said at last, "I've never played politics, but if there's any way in this world to get what we need for the mountains, I'll learn the game. I don't know much about talking with a Senator."

"You'll find that easy enough. He'll do most of it."

"Good fellow, is he?" "Down below, yes. I've never seen him roughing it. His wife is a good sport. And he'll bring a daughter."

"Ah!" Sierra exploded. "There we have it. Another woman! Dad, listen to me; let's call this off."

He gave Breck a resentful look out of grave blue eyes. "Pardner, you ain't throwin' Louy down? Wasn't she on the fire line with you last night? And didn't she go herself instead of sendin' the Indian? We passed Temple and he told us. Now you're bringin'—"

"Ease off, Slim," Cook checked him, laughing. "It's Breck's affair."

"The hell it is! I'm plumb disappointed in you, pardner."

Sierra stood up and walked from the cabin. It was the most urgent speech Breck had ever heard him give, and in it he sensed a fierce loyalty to Louise Temple.

"Now," said Cook, "maybe we can get down to facts. When will these people come?"

Breck glanced at his letter. "This was written two weeks ago. They might have other plans."

"Wire 'em. I left the switches in at headquarters. You can get Lone Tree by phone and have the message relayed from there."

Cook paused, drew at his pipe, then continued with rapid planning. "I'll detail you to do it up proper. Have them meet you at Dick Divine's pack camp; that's at the foot of the south trail. They're driving up the valley, I suppose?"

"Yes; from Pasadena."

"Well then, bring them here to Rock House. You've got tents. Show your Senator around while you're on patrol. Give him an idea of what we've got and what we need. How does that suit you?"

"All right," Breck answered, "if you say it's part of my job." But inwardly he was dubious. He had not wanted Irene Sutherland here.

CHAPTER XVII

Cook and Sierra rode back to headquarters that afternoon. Breck sent his message by wire, and then, turning into his bunk while it was still daylight, slept the clock around. His cabin was flooded with morning sun when he awoke. Even as he closed his eyes again, reluctant to leave the blankets, his telephone jangled from its post beyond the door.

He bounded out barefooted. Cook's voice came over the line. "Hello, Rock House, how is the morning?"

"Haven't had a look at it yet."

"Then here's something to wake you up. A relay from Lone Tree."

"All right," said Breck. "Let's have it."

He heard Cook's low chuckle, then: "Saved my life. Will meet you Friday. Party of five."

The ranger paused. "It's signed," he continued presently, "but I reckon on the telephone girl got it wrong, or I must have misunderstood in writing it down. Looks like 'Old Thing.'"

Breck grinned into the little iron box, but agreed solemnly, "That's a mistake, Dad. The name is Sutherland, you know."

"Now then," Cook said, "we've got to work this so you aren't away

"Bring 'em," Temple repeated. "More the better!"

Breck gave his promise, then rode on.

Twice on the way down he met salt trains coming up; cowboys with a dozen mules, each mule carrying two hundred and fifty pounds of rock in burlap bags. By evening he was on the last steep slope of the granite wall, with the Mojave Desert stretching away in a purple shadow of the Sierras themselves. At dark he came into the first corral of Dick Divine's pack outfit, and upon crossing a stream rode at once among fires of more cowboys camped near long piles of salt.

Dusk hid their faces. Some greeted him. Then he passed one alone who glanced up from his solitary blaze of willow twigs, stared and said nothing.

Breck raised a hand, though he knew there would be no reply. "Howdy, Art."

Shortly after that he approached a small house, strangely neat and white in a garden of flowers, as Breck had watched the swift scene from Divine's cabin, and now saw a girl's hand make a little gesture toward Art. The boy snatched off his hat, and then as the girl drove on, remained fixed in his saddle, staring after her.

He was still sitting like that, Breck knew, when the roadster slid to a stop at the house and Irene jumped out, laughing and reaching both hands to him. Her words came in staccato gasps: "Gordon! My dear! I should never have known you! You're—Why—?" She paused, surveyed him, ended helplessly, "Why Gordon!"

He watched her curiously at first, then warmed to spontaneous response. She stood before him as amazingly beautiful as ever; tall, dark, trimly outfitted in riding breeches, gray silk shirt, black tie, and polished tan boots, all of which were perhaps more stylish than comfortable, yet gave her figure magnetic grace. The sun had burned her cheeks on the drive across the desert, coloring them over olive skin, and the dry wind had cast a sparkle upon her usually languid, dark eyes.

Breck laughed into them, returned the pressure of her clasp, and they stood for an instant, wordless. Inwardly he had to admit some of the old feeling.

The Senator interrupted, boosting himself from the car. "You're looking fine, my boy. Fine! Say, I'd give something for your middle!"

Breck went to him. "You'll be this way if you live in the mountains long enough. I'm glad to see you, Senator."

Sutherland shook hands with a hearty campaign grasp, long and full of action. He was short and thick-set, past fifty, with a round face behind which lurked the humor of many good smoking-room stories. In clothes he had not followed Irene's example, but wore a thin suit of white and a limp Panama.

They were still in the first exchange of greetings when a second car swung around a bend of the road and burst through the willows, further scattering Art Tillson's mules. It halted near the roadster, a sedan scarcely showing its occupants in the piled-up baggage.

He opened the door, and a gray-haired, motherly face peered at him over a canvas flap. "How do you do, Gordon? You'll have to dig me out before I can reach you." The woman's voice came cheerily in spite of her cramped position.

The chauffeur came from in front to help him; a short, spare man who had been in the family always. In a moment they had the Senator's wife out. She gave Breck an impulsive hug, then stood off considering him from Stetson hat to service boots.

"You're a good-looking ranger, Gordon," was her verdict. "I must say that!"

"My thanks," he answered, smiling upon her. Of the Sutherland family she was the one who gave open affection. She babied the Senator and spoiled Irene, and at one time would have spoiled him too.

Dick Divine came from his cabin, introduced himself perfunctorily, then added to Breck, "I've got something on the table in there. They can eat while we're packin'."

Glancing down, his eye fell on the array of luggage. A startled look crossed his face.

Breck laughed. "Can we put this on three mules, Dick?"

The old packer blinked hard. "I'd say it ain't all here."

"Oh no," Irene agreed. "It isn't. You'll find the rest in my roadster."

from the station more than two nights. Understand me?"

"Easy."

"All right. Friday is two days off. You start out tomorrow morning and make Dick Divine's camp by dark. Then if your folks come any time at all before noon Friday you can pack them as far as Summit and camp. That will put you in Rock House again Saturday."

"OK," Breck answered.

After breakfast he dedicated his time to making tenderfoot tourists less tender. He could visualize the party of five arriving after their day and a half in the saddle—the Senator, padded in the wrong spot and letting the whole forest know how he hurt; his wife suffering more and saying less about it; Irene a good sport if she cared to be. The other two would be a maid and a chauffeur, who was also the Senator's handy-man.

Preparing camp for them, he put up four tents near the stream and not too far above his cabin.

He was on the down trail early next morning, for in the night he had realized it was only fair to stop at Temple Meadow and mention this party to Louise. The corral bars were open and the place apparently deserted when he came into camp. But in a moment Tom Temple opened his cabin door and hobbled out.

"Almost his first words were, 'Louy's gone saltn'.'"

As frankly, Breck answered, "That's too bad. I hoped to see her. Anything you want from the valley? I'm headed out and will be here again Saturday."

Temple wagged his gray head. "Thanks, Ranger, but the boys are makin' trips every day now, bringin' up salt. The whole range has it trucked up as far as Divine's, you know, then we pack it on green grass."

Breck hooked one knee around his saddle horn and smoked a cigarette before starting on.

"Figurin' to be at the rodeo?" Temple asked.

"When is that?"

"About a week, soon as saltn' is done and the boys can get together. Better make it. I beef a couple of young steers and have dancin' to music from down below. Folks come up here from Lone Tree—some farther."

"Sounds like a big time," said Breck. "Count on me. And say, are outsiders allowed? Tourists I mean."

"Lord amighty yes! They won't be outsiders when they git here!"

"I guess not," Breck grinned. "I'm bringing a party of five back this trip, some friends who'll camp at Rock House. They'd get a big wallop out of your show."

contrasted to the mule corrals and rough life about it. Dick Divine came to the door, holding up a lantern as he peered out. His face showed wrinkled and toothless, with sharp eyes looking from under long gray brows.

"Who's yere?" he demanded.

"Ranger from Rock House."

"Well, howdy, Ranger. Are you puttin' up?"

"For one night," Breck answered. He swung to the ground, and presently, having explained what he wanted and turned his animals loose with hobbles, he came back to find a meal fixed for him on the packer's table.

Art Tillson was still in camp the next morning. Rigging saddles for the tourists to come, Breck saw other cowmen load their strings of mules and vanish up the mountain. But Art, single-handed, was later than the rest. It was almost noon before he had his salt train ready.

His mules were bunched, and mounted, he was trying to rush them into line, when abruptly a roadster shot through the willow thicket. His animals plunged from the car, bucking at their packs as they scattered. Art wheeled his horse savagely as the car halted near him.

Lobbies Described as Groups Seeking To Influence Members of Legislatures

A lobby in the political sense is a group of persons or organizations seeking to influence the members of congress or a legislature in order to obtain the passage, or secure the defeat of, certain bills. The verb "to lobby" means to solicit the vote of a legislator or to attempt to influence him in the exercise of his official duties. Although in this sense the term is an Americanism, it is occasionally used in England in reference to measures before the house of commons. It originated before the Civil war, relates a writer in the Indianapolis News, and arose from the fact that lobbyists work in the lobbies—halls or vestibules—of congress, and not actually on the floor of the senate or house of representatives.

The lobbies are often facetiously referred to as the "third house." In 1871 M. Schele de Vere wrote on this subject:

"The work done by members of congress is very largely influenced by agents from without, and by certain established usages of their own. The former is collectively called the 'lobby,' a term which, originating in the German laube, a bower or small summer-house, meant for many centuries nothing more than a small hall or entering room, preceding a larger room. In America, the rooms and passages surrounding the hall, in which legislative bodies hold their meetings, soon monopolized the term, and in a short time the men who assembled there to exercise whatever outside pressure they could bring to bear upon the legislators, were themselves called the 'lobby.' All who had petitions to be granted, contracts to be given, or favors of any kind to be bestowed, either went themselves or sent well-qualified agents to Washington, to 'lobby' their cause, as it was called. Capitalists used the power which wealth gives, even where no bribery was attempted; high social standing was made serviceable, and even beauty and the charms of a silvery voice were not wanting to secure the votes of susceptible members."

Cleopatra's War Trumpet

Cleopatra used sistrum at the battle of Actium and the sistrum was thus satirically called Queen Cleopatra's war trumpet. It was an ancient Egyptian percussion instrument with indefinite musical pitch, a kind of metallic rattle. It consisted of an oval metal frame fastened to a handle and crossed by four metal horizontal rods passing through holes large enough to allow them to rattle when shaken.

PAUL CROSSES INTO EUROPE

LESSON TEXT—Acts 15:36; 16:4-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia.—Acts 16:10.

Guidance is the moment by moment need of every man and woman, boy and girl. The whole of life calls for decisions, many of which look quite innocent and unimportant, but upon which the destiny of an entire life may turn. Who does not recall the poet's lament over the want of an ordinary horse-shoe nail which resulted in the loss of the shoe, which disabled the horse, whose rider was lost, with the result that the battle went against his people.

Since the great issues of life may turn on the simplest of choices, we need guidance at every point in life. This need has been recognized by those who would make merchandise of their neighbors. Quacks and charlatans offer guidance by every method, from reading the palm, looking at the stars, or consulting the spirits, to those smug enterprises which pose as spiritual and talk much of prayer, but which do not honor the name of Christ nor recognize Him as Redeemer and Lord.

One of the glories of the Christian faith is that the believer is indwelt by the third person of the Trinity, the Holy Spirit Himself, who is ready and willing to give divine guidance in every detail of life from the smallest to the greatest.

We study today the coming of the gospel into Europe, and that means through our forefathers to America. We consider what from our viewpoint was a crucial point in the history of the Church. Thanks be to God that His servant Paul was in that hour obedient to the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Observe that the gospel came to Europe

I. By Providential Hindrance (15:36; 16:4-8).

Not only the steps, but also the stops of a good man are ordered of the Lord. That is not an easy lesson to learn. We may be as much in the will of the Lord when all of our efforts seem to be thwarted as when they prosper. Let us not forget it.

Paul had set out on a second journey to carry out a follow-up campaign in the cities where he had already preached. This was a good plan and had God's blessing (see v. 5). But soon we find that word "forbidden" (v. 6) and then "suffered not" (v. 7). The Holy Spirit began to close doors to the gospel preacher. Now what? Shall he go on in determined self-will? Or shall he become discouraged and embittered in his soul? No, let him wait, for God is guiding him by providential hindrance, which is soon to be followed

II. By Divine Guidance (16:9, 10).

The Spirit spoke to Paul in a vision revealing the divine purpose that the gospel should go over into Macedonia. The Spirit leads in our day, possibly not by visions, but by impelling inward prompting complemented and checked by the teaching of Scripture and by providential circumstances, and a man may know what is the will of God.

A word of caution is needed at this point. Some earnest Christian people go astray by projecting their own desires and purposes into the place where they come to regard them as the will of God, and thus do themselves and others, and Christianity itself much harm. The three things already mentioned should agree—(1) the inner prompting of the Spirit, (2) the teaching of God's Word, and (3) God's hand in our outward circumstances.

III. Through a Faithful Witness (vv. 11-14).

The gospel came to Europe because Paul and his fellow workers were faithful to their calling. When God led, they went to Macedonia (vv. 11, 12), where they sought out those who were in the place of prayer (v. 13). Paul spoke to them about Christ (v. 14). It is one thing to have a vision, it is another thing to be obedient to that vision (Acts 26:19). There are some who talk much of their consecration to God, but who give little evidence of it. The little girl was right (though her grammar was wrong) when she said, "It's better to walk your talk than to talk your walk."

IV. Through a Receptive Heart (vv. 14, 15).

God sent an obedient messenger to the place where He had a prepared heart (v. 14). Space forbids much reference to this godly, successful business woman and house-mother, but we do note that she not only received the Word of God into her own heart, but at once gave herself to the task of passing it on. The first thing she could do was to give aid and comfort to the messenger of the truth, and she did that at once. Be assured that from that day on she did all she could to prosper the gospel on its way through Europe and to the ends of the earth. Have we done likewise?

TINLEY PARK GARDEN CLUB

Edith Baldwin Co-chairman

The Tinley Park Garden club met at the home of Mrs. H. Brueggeman on Thursday, April 20. The following announcements are called to your attention. Lilac Lay between the 10th and 20th of May. Watch for definite date. Blossom Festival at Benton Harbor, Michigan, will be held April 30th to May 7th. Tulip time in Holland, Michigan, May 13 to 21.

The increasing attendance at the one o'clock study period indicates it is proving helpful. Garden Success rests on five rules. 1—Plant in straight rows running north and south, the rows far enough apart to give the plant a chance for full development. 2—Do not try to grow more than you can cultivate well. 3—Space your plants carefully. Do not be afraid to thin out. 4—Fertilize. 5—Spray at the first appearance of any pests.

At two o'clock the president called the business meeting to order. Arrangements have been made with the Boy Scouts to take care of the park this summer.

Several of the members will attend the Fruit and Flower Guild luncheon on Friday at Carson's.

The most welcome Bank borrower today is the man whose keen sense of personal responsibility and respect for his pledged word, cause him to meet each loan obligation on or before the maturity date. His best credential when seeking further credit, is his record of previous loans paid in full and paid on time.

A conscientious borrower who may find a renewal unavoidable, will take pains to notify the Bank of his necessity well in advance of the due date. Formerly many careless borrowers made it a practice to renew their loans over and over again. Today, Banks are no longer permitted to extend loans indefinitely.

We have money to loan to good responsible borrowers. See us if in need of funds.

May 1st Is Last Day For Signing Farm Plan Under AAA

Wed. Afternoon Club Celebrates 25th Anniversary

Cook County farmers have until May 1st to express their intentions to participate in the 1939 AAA farm program by completing and signing individual farm plans, announces Carl Bormet, president of the Cook County Agricultural Conservation Association.

May 1 is also the final date for filing combination farm share agreements and for filing request for inspection on price adjustment payments. Farmers can not request inspection for determining performance and obtaining payments in this year's program unless they sign farm plans by May 1.

Through April 22, fully 700 farmers had met with local committees and completed their farm plans. This number is 250 more than those who participated in the program last year.

Information received this week from Lee M. Gentry, chairman of the State Agricultural Conservation Committee shows that through March 31 a total of 1,395,126 farmers in the 10 North Central States had indicated their intentions to participate in the program this year by signing farm plans.

These farmers represent 62.7 per cent of the farmers in the North Central Region and about 250,000 more than the total number of farmers who participated in the 1938 AAA program. Corn belt farmers began signing their farm plans in February. A majority of those already signed were completed in March, and indications are that a large number of additional plans will be signed in the region during April. More than 154,703 farmers in Illinois have signed plans.

Mr. Bormet urges all farmers who plan to participate in the 1939 farm program to see the secretary at the Soil Conservation office and complete a farm plan as soon as possible. The plan shows the acreage allotments, the soil-building goal, and maximum payments for the farm, and it has a map to use in working out the farming system which the producer considers best for the farm in 1939.

No farm inspection for the purpose of determining performance and payments will be made on farms for which farm plans are not made out by May 1, except where landlords request such inspection by letter to the county committee. Either the completion of the farm plan for participation or a letter from the landlord, indicating his intention to participate in the 1939 program, received by the county committee by May 1, will assure inspection of a farm for the purpose of determining performance. It will be impossible to obtain payment on farms for which no performance inspection is so requested by May 1.

The recent Supreme Court's favorable decision for marketing quotas has done more to establish the AAA than any event since a similar decision invalidated it four years ago.

On April 29, 1914, a group of neighbors met at the home of Mrs. E. M. Powell of Palos Park, Ill., for the purpose of forming a social club. They decided to name their club the Wednesday Afternoon Club as they were to meet the first Wednesday of each month. The following were elected: President, Mrs. E. M. Powell; Vice President, Mrs. John McCord; Sec-Treas., Mrs. A. Preller, with Mrs. John Laasch, Mrs. Peter Homerding and Miss Janet Weir to serve as Flower committee.

They were to meet at the home of one of the members each month, where they played games, had contests of different kinds for prizes were given. The hostess served refreshments consisting of two articles of food and a beverage.

The following are the names of the charter members: Mesdames Wm. Teason, Peter Homerding, John Laasch, G. Christensen, Theo. Krupp, Henry Braasch, Ed. Cowan, E. M. Powell, Adolph Preller, John McCord, John Bush, Albert Preller, August Hamstegle, Wm. McAuley, Wm. Braasch, Louis Bush, Frank A. Powell, Theo. Kramer, G. A. Braasch, The Misses Agnes and Janet Weir, Elsie Preller, Elizabeth and Caroline Heatherwick, Emma and Anna Keueger and Blanche Ryan. There have been many more added to the club list in the past twenty-five years.

In the month of August each year they had a large family picnic, they brought baskets filled with good things to eat, they had weenie roasts too, races for big and little alike. The men and boys would have a ball game in the afternoon.

Of late years the members decided to do something that would be a change for the busy housewife, so a committee is appointed to find a place where we can have our dinner and a social time in the afternoon. Here each and all can enjoy a good time without making many plans before hand.

We have lost a number of our members through death, they are sadly missed, but we try to carry on as they did, doing a good deed for others when needed. Flowers and cards are always sent to the sick and calls made when possible.

We are celebrating our 25th anniversary as the Wednesday afternoon club with a dinner and bunco party. Each member present will receive an anniversary gift as a remembrance of twenty-five years of friendship.

WMRO To Go On Summer Schedule

Beginning May 1st, 1939, WMRO has received special permission to go on at 5:00 a.m., Standard time. Martin R. O'Brien, owner-manager who comes originally from Maple Park, where his brothers are engaged in farming, stated that he believes that an early morning program of popular music with request numbers, would prove very popular. Mr. O'Brien announces that WMRO, which comes in at 1250 kilocycles, would serve a wide area and a definite need by coming in on the air at this early hour.

Mr. O'Brien invites our listeners to send in their request numbers for this early morning program and assures us that he believes that their ample transcription library will be able to supply virtually any number requested.

Local radio dealers will be glad to give information to any of our listeners who have trouble in getting WMRO clearly. Mail indicates that WMRO is heard clearly approximately 100 miles in each direction from Aurora, so that any sets in this vicinity would be able to get this station which comes in at 1250.

STYLE OR COMFORT

By Ruby Stockdale

When speaking of styles one is reminded of fashions, clothes, gayety, merriment and the like. To be stylish to most people, means being highly fashionable, well-groomed, popular, modest and brilliant, but, what about comfort. Is it always comfortable to be stylish? Not very comfortable anyway. Observe the ladies of today. Are their clothes as comfortable on them as it looks to be to the public? It appears as though they are wearing these awkward styles and fashions to keep up with the time or even getting ahead of time.

It has often been said that "time changes everything". Isn't that true, especially with hats? A few years ago who would have ever thought of wearing a hat such as are being worn by the ladies of today and being comfortable and content with wearing it in public places. Are the hats being made to fit the head or is the head supposed to fit the hat? If that is the case what about these awkward shaped hats in the form of a triangle, with a small brim? Would you say being comfortable in a hat that you are self conscious of? Hoping that the wind doesn't blow and being self conscious when it does. Comfort or style? Most people, not all, consider style before comfort.

We also see the highly fashionable style of hats, for instance, the hat with a whole flower garden planted on top. This hat is said to be more comfortable than it appears, but even so it appears to be heavy and over-balanced. Flowers on a hat are nice and some are attractive, but, not when the whole garden is thrown on.

Another hat, is one that might fit a head on a doll. This one is tied on with ribbons and the like. Style? Well I should say it is style. But—what about the ears? If it snows, well, there wouldn't be a thing we could do about that, not if we are in style. As it seems at this present time, style marches first and before anything else.

A flat hat that lies under the chin is worn at an angle and pulled down so as to shade one eye. This hat in particular is known as the pancake hat. There are such a variety of different nick names, tilts and angles that need mentioning that it would be most difficult to stress an opinion on all of the hats.

A cartwheel hat, with a high cone crown and decorated with a variety of ribbons, feathers, and flowers seems to be popular this year. Why? Because it meets up with the latest in style and that is what the people are after.

A beautiful felt hat is often ruined by a large over-hanging drape, thrown over the top with one end hanging down the back. A veil in a different color is sewed onto the drape to give the hat a more sophisticated touch.

A stove pipe crown with a turned up bumper brim decorated with wide colored ribbons and a variety of daisies and other ornaments is advertised as being a hat of deep comfort. How can anyone be comfortable in a hat that they know everyone is staring at? Are the people supposed to notice the face or the hat?

Why not turn a soup bowl upside down over the head and throw a dish towel over the top and tie it under the chin? This would give you as much of that sophisticated look as any hat so far as balance and appearance are concerned.

YOUR LIFE AND BILLS

A few weeks ago I published the diary of two days in the life of an Illinois legislator. This week I am giving my readers an imaginary day in the life of Mr. and Mrs. Illinois Citizen and their family based upon the bills which have been introduced thus far in the 61st Session of the General Assembly for the purpose of showing the variety and scope of the approximately 1,200 bills now before us.

Mr. and Mrs. Citizen live in a home sold them by real estate brokers licensed by Senate Bill No. 367, planned by architects licensed by S. B. No. 161, plumbing installed under House Bill No. 703, plastered and stuccoed by H. B. 672, painted by painters regulated by H. B. 299, landscaped by H. B. 126 with seeds for grass and flowers under H. B. 578.

Touches Broad Field

Mr. and Mrs. Citizen and their children whose births are recorded by provisions of H. B. 614 or who may be adopted by H. B. 744 or H. B. 17 are awakened by clocks regulated by horologists licensed by H. B. 94. They attire themselves in clothes cleaned under provisions of H. B. 843, let out the family dog H. B. 665, H. B. 424, S. B. 75 and S. B. 10, and bring in the newspapers, H. B. 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219 and 137.

Our family is summoned to breakfast by the maid whose wages are established by minimum wage bill for domestics in S. B. 243 and H. B. 302. A hearty breakfast is served consisting of apples H. B. 634 or canned or preserved fruit H. B. 366, eggs H. B. 760 and H. B. 407, meat H. B. 41, milk and cream S. B. 378, S. B. 379, S. B. 80-81-82, H. B. 673-684-747, and butter or its substitutes in oleomargarine H. B. 541. Perhaps some of the food has been fried in lard substitutes regulated by H. B. 613.

Meet "Bill" Everywhere

After breakfast the head of the house departs for his office in a motor car equipped with anti-skid equipment and devices to remove frost, steam and ice from the windshield H. B. 705. He must have a driver's license H. B. 652. Arriving at his office by elevator H. B. 692 he is greeted by license regulations if he is an insurance agent S. B. 357 lawyer, 356, chiroprapist, dentist, S. B. 362, pharmacist S. B. 363, optometrist S. B. 364, physician S. B. 365, architect S. B. 366, real estate broker S. B. 367 or barber S. B. 370. If he is a manufacturer or retailer he is confronted with wages and hours regulations H. B. 531 or anti-spy restrictions H. B. 94. He puts on his glasses to read the laws and finds the glasses regulated by S. B. 148.

School Children Don't Miss

In the meantime the children have departed for school. They assemble in the various rooms each one of which must have on display an American flag not less than eleven by eighteen inches in size H. B. 173. They are greeted by teachers with minimum wages fixed by S. B. 102 and H. B. 259, with pensions provided by S. B. 205-206 and H. B. 499-500. The pupils may have been transported to school by S. B. 66 and H. B. 269. The school will be well financed by state aid provided in H. B. 599 or not so well provided for in H. B. 247. Altogether there are about forty bills on school subjects now introduced.

The mother in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Citizen goes to market. If she shops in a chain store she may find it licensed and regulated by S. B. 141 and 152 or H. B. 271, 280 and 458. She goes to the beauty shop which is taken care of in S. B. 286 and S. B. 368 and H. B. 678, H. B. 663 and H. B. 78. She may visit in behalf of her family's health the physician S. B. 241, S. B. 365, H. B. 612, the Osteopath H. B. 293, the chiropractor H. B. 282, H. B. 577, the naprapath H. B. 327, or the dentist S. B. 337, S. B. 363 and H. B. 712.

In Field of Sports

In summer the family attend the races S. B. 181, S. B. 60. In winter the hockey games may draw their attendance H. B. 331. They may purchase chewing gum from vendors taxed by S. B. 149.

Our Illinois family may be able in words of slang "to take" all of the regulations set forth in the various measures presented to the legislature but in case they cannot survive they may be properly embalmed for burial H. B. 659 by funeral directors with educational requirements specified by H. B. 502 with notice of death duly recorded by funeral directors in H. B. 581.

I have not been able to mention every activity in this recital of family life. There are many bills in the General Assembly on the subject of crime in case our family gets into trouble. There are bills on the subject of motor traffic, industry and labor, all touching closely the average citizen. On all of the subjects which I have mentioned by number of bill or by inference your representatives will be able to give information if desired.

ORLAND

Epworth League Notes

The Orland chapter of the Epworth League met Sunday evening at 6:45 in the M. E. church. Gordon Doctor the newly elected vice-president conducted the meeting. Clarence Creer continued with the book report on the "Life of John Wesley." Due to the fact that Mae Reish, who was to have had charge of the devotionals, was unable to be present, Lucille Cooper read the scripture lesson for the evening.

Announcement was read of the Board of Control meeting held at the Harvey First Methodist church, 115 Boulevard and Lexington avenue, April 24. Also that of the district spring rally and banquet to be held at St. Stephen's Methodist church 113th and State street, Thursday evening, April 27. The secretary received 3 tickets from this banquet and is pleased to report that the tickets have been distributed and reservations have been made. Although a nice group attended the meeting, it is hoped a larger number will be present at our next meeting May 14. On Monday evening, April 24, Margaret Cooper, Gordon Doctor and Charlyn Knox and Rev. Nye attended the Board of Control meeting of the Calumet sub-district, held in the First Methodist church of Harvey. A great deal of valuable information was brought home by those members attending, as well as meeting numbers of other Leaguers. Thursday evening, April 27, Clarence Creer, Margaret Cooper and Charlyn Knox attended the spring rally as representatives of the Orland League.

The Orland Park public school will close for the season on June 2. Open house and achievement program will be held in the school auditorium on the evening of May 3. The parents of the students are especially invited to attend.

Last Tuesday the Orland Park school held a card and bunco party in the school auditorium. Fourteen tables of bunco, four of pinocle and one of 500 were played. There was a good attendance and the gross receipts amounted to $20.50.

The spring weather has brought out many outdoor activities in the Orland school. Baseball, track events shot put and high jumps are some of the outdoor sports being enjoyed. One of the out-of-the-ordinary features seen the last few days on the school grounds is archery. The Orland school has purchased some playing sets and students are fast becoming expert archers emulating Robin Hood.

Mrs. Thos. Wheeler is visiting in Meadeville, Pa., with her daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Glahn. She reports having a very fine time.

Mrs. Phillip Steffin who was recently a patient in Silver Cross hospital in Joliet returned to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ben Yunker and is convalescing nicely.

The Guild of the Orland Park M. E. Church held their annual spring festival and supper in the church last Thursday evening. About 180 guests attended.

The Blue Island high school reopened Monday after being closed since March. The Orland Park students who have been attending this school up until the time it closed, returned Monday and resumed their studies. It is understood the school will be in session on Saturdays also in order to make up for lost time.

The Community hall project which was up for consideration a couple of months ago, has apparently died out. No further meetings have been held and no action has been taken.

Fifteen members of the M. E. church Guild and Rev. Nye, the pastor, attended a spring meeting of the South Suburban club Methodist Woman's Association held Tuesday in the Hazelcrest Community church. The morning session opened at 10 a. m., the theme being, "Facing A New World Tomorrow." Mrs. Esther Pahnke, of Chicago Heights was the song leader. Mrs. Louise Wolf of Hazelcrest extended the greetings and Mrs. Godden of the First Methodist church of Harvey, responded.

Mrs. M. Karn of Crete had charge of devotionals. Mrs. Edythe Null of Hazelcrest sang a solo. Rev. Herbert Null of Hazelcrest offered the noon prayer. Following the luncheon, the afternoon session opened at 1:45 p. m., with a song session. Mrs. Petrie, vice president, gave a short address. A trio consisting of Mrs. Pahnke, Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. Louis, all of Chicago Heights, rendered selections. Rev. Paul Grimes, pastor of the West Ridge community church delivered the address. An award for the largest attendance was given to the Ladies Aid society of the Markham M. E. church. The consecration service and the benediction was in charge of Rev. Mr. Vandraek of West Peotone. The registrars were Mrs. Wolf and Mrs. Throckmorton and the hostess was Mrs. Massey.

Mr. L. Stockdale, of Palos Park was a speaker at the Science club meeting which was held last Friday afternoon, April 14. Mr. Stockdale is president of the Cook County Bee-keepers association, and personally has a large number of bee hives in Palos Park. His talk was made particularly interesting because he had 10,000 real bees and exhibits with him. He described the life of bees from the gathering, manufacturing, and storing of honey and bee-bread, to the making of wax and building of the comb. He also explained the differences in the duties of the queen, drone and worker bees. Mr. Stockdale's talk was enjoyed by all who heard it, and they gained much information about bees which they had not known previously.

Dairy Cattle Royalty to Grace World's Fair

This young lady and her pure-bred companion were photographed while attending ground-breaking ceremonies for the "Dairy World of Tomorrow" on the World's Fair grounds at New York.

The "Dairy World of Tomorrow" is to be one of the striking exhibits at the 1939 Fair. Here 150 dairy cows, each a queen on the basis of her type and performance, will be on exhibit. These cows will be selected by the Breed Associations representing the following breeds, Jerseys, Guernseys, Holstein-Friesians, Brown-Swiss, and Ayrshires. These cows will be milked three times daily on a rotolactor equipped with magnetic milkers—giving the public a chance to observe the most modern methods in handling milk. In addition to the cows mentioned, calves and a bull of each breed will be on display.

The "Dairy World of Tomorrow" is being staged by the five breed associations mentioned above in cooperation with The Borden Company for the purpose of showing the place of the pure-bred cow in the economics of dairying.

New York City
Brushes Up for Fair of Century

NEW YORK—While the New York World's Fair 1939 speeds toward its opening on April 30, the city is preparing to receive 15,000,000 guests.

Grover A. Whalen

The Fair will be the greatest party this town has ever thrown.

Thousands of workmen, artists and technicians are now engaged in finishing-up the vast spectacle and large crews are at work on Manhattan Island, grooming hotels, apartment houses, theatres, and public buildings for the date when The World of Tomorrow will steal the show from The City of Today.

"Going to the Fair" this year will mean two shows for the price of one so far as the out-of-town visitor is concerned. New York's Broadway, amusement center of the nation, will not rival, but will supplement entertainments at the Fair.

Extending in a broad arc beyond the New York State Marine Amphitheatre and along the eastern shore of Fountain Lake is the 280-acre Amusement area where gaiety will rule.

Million Dollar Show

At the amphitheatre, Billy Rose, Broadway's master showman, will present Eleanor Holm in his $1,000,000 extravaganza in which 300 dancing and swimming girls will take part. A curtain of water will shield the stage from the audience between the acts. The theatre will seat 10,000 persons.

Rides and thrillers take up one section of the Amusement Area; games of every kind another, while still another section will hold exotic villages.

In the Cuban village, covering three acres, the atmosphere of Havana's cafes will be recaptured. Here the rumba and danzon will be danced to native orchestras and arroz con pollo will be on the menu.

In Merrie England visitors will watch Elizabethan games on the village green, eat ample slices of roast beef and walk the streets of Old London.

Old New York will be another village. Here the Bowery of the mauve decade will live again.

Admiral Richard Byrd's "Penguin Island" and "Sun Valley," a winter wonderland with a daily blizzard will bring a dash of frosty fun to the scene.

Thrills for the Kids

It is estimated that 2,000,000 children between the ages of 3 and 14 will visit the $1,000,000 Children's World. Admission to this zone will be free, although modest charges will be made for special entertainments including the diminutive restaurant.

In the "thrill section" will be found a parachute leap where visitors will experience all the excitement of "bailing out" without risking broken bones. An automatic, "fool-proof" mechanism will release the "chutes in such a manner that folding up will be impossible. The landing will be gentle. While this is one of the latest hair-raisers, the play center will be replete with coasters, wheels and rides of all varieties.

White Sands Spectacular

Some globe trotters say that the White Sands National monument in New Mexico is more spectacular than the great Sahara desert.

The Wild Life
Corner

By Mel Whitaker

We have now reached that time of the year when our thoughts turn from wild game to fishing. The State Department of Conservation has as much interest in the fishing in our state as they have in wildlife.

In addition to the state hatcheries which produce millions of fish annually we also obtain fish from government hatcheries. It has only been the past few years that Illinois has made much effort to restock its waters. Years ago our lakes and streams were considered good fishing but in late years one has been fortunate to catch any fish in most Illinois waters. Since the restocking program, we have seen our supply of game fish steadily increasing. This again proves that man must help nature maintain a balance in its wildlife. The state furnishes the fish to the sportsmen clubs, who in turn see that they are planted in the waters as soon as they arrive. We have pointed out several times that with out these various groups this work could not possibly succeed without heavy expense to the state.

To those of you interested in conservation, whether you fish and hunt or not, we invite you to join your local chapter and do your part in this program.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

HIGH PRESSURE SALESMANSHIP

A SALESMAN, 10 years ago unscrupulous but successful, came in to see me today with his troubles. He no longer makes sales. I asked him what he thought was the matter.

"That's just it," said he. "I don't know. I give 'em the works—but they don't buy."

This man is a salesman of the old school—a worshipper at the shrine of high pressure salesmanship. His methods no longer make sales. He thinks he's losing his grip.

That is not the trouble. The truth is that high-pressure salesmanship is out, is dead, is obsolete, is without power to make sales in these days of greater education.

People haven't changed, but they have become better educated in the higher education of taking care of themselves and their money. The process which brought about this education is newspaper advertising.

It used to be possible for a glib talker to take almost anything out to sell, no matter how worthless or inferior, and by sheer high-pressure selling to "clean up." But not now.

Even the lowliest buyer knows that certain claims are untrue, and that the price asked for certain items is excessive. These things he knows because advertising, his refuge against false claims, told him so.

The average customer today is much better informed than even professional buyers were 20 years ago.

The housewife knows which foods contain vitamins, which contain vegetable oils, which contain expensive ingredients and the like. She knows the effect of this or that product.

She is never, therefore, at the mercy of the high-pressure artist who seeks to rob her by giving her less than others and charging her more for it.

Advertising in the newspapers, which she consults regularly, has built into her life an expert knowledge of values and prices and qualities. These make her an extraordinarily well informed person.

He who would sell the average customer must come with good value, a fair price and high quality. Otherwise he won't get even a hearing, because we have something now with which to compare unknown or new goods—and we are quick to reject those that do not measure up.

Much more than a selling aid for business is advertising. It is an educational system which is making Americans the best-educated buyers in the world. It is an economic system which is giving Americans more for their money every day.

The calves came to represent the five dairy breeds which will participate and from left to right they are Guernsey, Jersey, Brown-Swiss, Holstein, and Ayrshire.

The folks with them are: (Left to right) George M. Waugh, Jr., executive vice-president, The Borden Company; Wm. F. Fretz (petting calf), representing the American Guernsey Cattle Club; Lou Morley, Secretary, American Jersey Cattle Club;

Everett Waddy, Jr., representing the Brown-Swiss Association; D. N. Boice, representing the Brown-Swiss Association; Theodore G. Montague, President The Borden Company; Grover Whalen, representing the New York World's Fair; Mark Kenney, representing the Holstein-Friesian Association; D. W. McLauri, the Holstein-Friesian Association; Henry W. Jeffers, Sr., representing the Walker-Gordon Laboratories, Division of The Borden Company.

The cows will be milked three times daily and will be fed, housed and cared for as part of the Borden exhibit. The display is located on the Central Mall of the World's Fair and for once the dairy cow has "made Broadway."

Political observers believed Senator Donahey missed a chance of becoming a leading candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination by signing a whitewash report on the TVA . . . Significance of the gains made by Republicans in the Chicago mayoralty election are being discussed . . . Need for some plan to revive business is becoming more and more urgent.

WASHINGTON. — Vic Donahey "missed the boat" in the TVA investigation. This is quite a general impression, it can be discovered by questioning political observers in Washington. But the proof lies in the fact that there is simply no discussion of it. One has to bring the subject up, to drag discussion of Donahey in by the ears, so to speak, to obtain opinions. The Ohio senator, so far as Washington is concerned, is the forgotten man.

Sen. Donahey

Now this is an extraordinary situation. It is the case of a man who ignored one of the easiest avenues to being a real contender for the White House that has presented itself for a generation.

Let's look at the picture. We have President Roosevelt himself, who may be a candidate for a third term, though polls indicate he would not be a strong candidate against a united Republican party. We have Vice President Garner and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, either of whom would be almost ideal if they were a little younger—and Garner just may win despite his 70 years.

Then we have a flock of candidates including Postmaster General James A. Farley, Sen. Champ Bennett Clark of Missouri, and Paul V. McNutt, the Indiana strong man. Farley is a Catholic, Clark is from a state which is generally counted as safely Democratic anyhow, and McNutt, though able and aggressive, has lots of enemies in important Democratic delegate gathering circles.

But Donahey is from Ohio! Its 26 electoral votes are vital to Democratic success. Far from being in the bag, it went overwhelmingly Republican last fall, electing Robert A. Taft as senator, John W. Bricker as governor and 15 Republicans as against 9 Democrats to the house.

Donahey Wins Votes in Ohio As No One Else Ever Has

Actually Donahey has demonstrated that he can win votes in Ohio as no other Democrat or Republican ever has. It is not too strong a statement to claim that his runs have never been exceeded, for that matter, in any state in the Union, not even barring the amazing runs of Alfred E. Smith in New York, if one figures proportionately.

Donahey carried Ohio in 1924 by more than 150,000, running on the Democratic ticket. On the same day Calvin Coolidge carried Ohio by more than 690,000. Again, all the power of the Roosevelt administration was not able to nominate Charles West against Donahey for senator in 1934.

Owing nothing to Roosevelt, he refused Jim Farley's demand, made in the presence of half a dozen witnesses, that he second Roosevelt's nomination at Philadelphia in 1936. Farley just would not stop trying, so Vic finally walked out of the hall.

And on top of all that, as chairman of the TVA investigating committee, Donahey signed an innocuous report by the majority, which is generally regarded as a mere whitewash.

Suppose for a moment that Donahey had made a minority report of his own, not agreeing with the three Republican critics on the committee, but insisting that the "yardstick" was a joke. Suppose he had quoted in it what David E. Lillienthal had said about the "advantages" the government enjoyed in producing cheap electricity—low interest, ability to charge off much of the capital cost to navigation, flood control, etc., less cost for taxes, etc.

It would have made front page stories in every newspaper, especially as these statements by Lillienthal never received much attention and were not remembered. Donahey would still be in the limelight.

See Blow to New Deal in Chicago Mayoralty Election

The blow to the New Deal in the Chicago mayoralty election, and its significance with regard to 1940, has not been fully appreciated outside Illinois. It is important not only as indicating the sharp Republican gains that the G. O. P. leaders have been claiming, but as giving the conservative Democrat group considerably more strength.

As far as Republican gains are concerned, it is only necessary to scan the figures for the last few elections in Chicago proper—not including the remainder of Cook county.

In 1935 Edward J. Kelly was elected mayor of Chicago by a plurality of 631,954.

In 1936 President Roosevelt rolled up a plurality over Alfred M. Landon in Chicago of 555,386.

In 1938 Scott W. Lucas carried Chicago over his Republican senatorial opponent by 255,277.

And in 1939 Kelly was re-elected by only 182,410.

Democrats Have Not Kept Pace With Growth of G. O. P.

As downstate Illinois is normally Republican—Lucas would have been defeated in 1938 had it not been for his sizable majority in Chicago—it would appear that if the entire state of Illinois had been voting on May 4 there would have been a Republican victory.

This may not mean a thing, but certainly if it does not the statements put out by some Democratic leaders, including the ever optimistic Alben W. Barkley, Democratic leader of the senate, that this spells Democratic victory in 1940, do not either.

It may not mean a thing because no one knows who will be the candidates of either party in 1940, nor precisely what will be the issues. But it is apparent that the Democratic strength in Chicago has not kept pace with the growth of Republican strength since 1935, when it touched high tide.

It is well known among Chicago friends of Kelly in Washington that the mayor expected confidently a majority of not less than 400,000. He was confident that he would make a better showing than Senator Lucas did last fall, though he knew he could not reach his own huge lead in 1935, and he only hoped to approach the Roosevelt 1936 majority.

Need for Some Plan to Revive Business Is Vital

A big, spectacular plan to revive business will be announced by the White House very shortly. Details of what it is to be are being kept closely guarded. There is every desire to avoid another fiasco such as the "appeasement" program of unhappy memory.

Besides, what is being considered now may not bear much resemblance to the plan when it is finally announced. President Roosevelt has a way of letting his consultants think he is agreeing with them 100 per cent, and then making a decision almost the opposite. So one can never be sure by talking to any particular group that has been urging a plan on the President that their particular plan will become official. The President may take a plan which was advocated by some other group, or he may work out a compromise from all the plans suggested.

All that is definitely known at the moment, therefore, is that something is on the fire, with the object of making business better in the 18 months just ahead. The need for that is vital.

There is no doubt about the President's opinion on this subject. He realizes it is vital. The difficulty does not lie in convincing him of that, but in persuading him to agree to moves which are certain to bring about that objective.

Thus the President was thoroughly sold on the idea by Harry L. Hopkins, just before he appointed Hopkins to be secretary of commerce.

Hopkins made no secret of his ideas on the subject, and his intentions and plans when he should be secretary of the department which has so much to do with business. He talked frankly and freely to many senators, for example, and his views so expressed were very helpful in bringing about his confirmation by the senate with so little unpleasantness.

Lull in Developments May Be Due to Hopkins' Illness

But Hopkins has been a sick man ever since. Far from overplaying his physical condition, most newspaper accounts have underestimated its seriousness. As this is written it is not at all certain that Hopkins may not have to pay another visit to Rochester.

Whether the lull in developments has been due to the illness of Hopkins, thus giving the left wingers—who do not believe in appeasement though they know the results predicted for it are necessary—a better chance to win the President over, or whether it has been that Hopkins misunderstood the President in the first place about appeasement, no one knows.

Harry Hopkins

But certainly the first step that Hopkins predicted to senators—settlement of the TVA purchases of the privately owned electric properties in Tennessee—came very quickly after he had said he thought it necessary. And right there and then appeasement stopped.

The tax reforms that Hopkins had agreed were necessary were spiked by the President himself. Indignant senators who had talked with Hopkins about it, and then found themselves out on a limb later, have not been able to get a clear understanding of what happened because of Hopkins' illness and absence from Washington.

But one thing is sure. Something new is coming. Whether it will turn the trick, or is even calculated to turn it, remains to be seen.

Vatican City Is Smallest State But Others Give It Close Race

Monaco, San Marino and Liechtenstein Are 'Also Rans'

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

The coronation in Vatican City of a new pope has turned world attention to that tiniest of sovereign states. The importance of Vatican City in world affairs and how it compares in size to the other mid-gest states of the world is the subject of renewed discussion.

Vatican City, the newest and smallest sovereign state in the world, is a walled area of less than 109 acres entirely surrounded by Italian territory, the city of Rome. The new state came into being with signing of the Lateran treaty with Italy in 1929. The unification of Italy in 1870 had deprived the Roman pontiffs of a territory stretching from sea to sea, an area of about 16,000 square miles with a population of more than 3,000,000 persons.

Envoys From World Powers. Today the population of the little sovereign state that replaces the old papal domain is slightly in excess of 1,000; yet so important is it as the seat of the pope that 37 countries, including some of the greatest world powers, send diplomatic representatives there.

Under the pope Vatican City has a governor, a secretary-general, a central council, three courts, an "army" of 110 Swiss guards, and a police force numbering 100. It has its coinage and postage stamps, with its own post office, welfare center, railway station, and telegraph office.

In striking contrast to Vatican City in many ways is the next smallest sovereign state, the Principality of Monaco, with an area of 370 acres. It lies near the French-Italian border on the Mediterranean. It is the only one of the world's pygmy states that possesses a sea-coast. Its "navy" is the yacht of the reigning prince. The revenue of the principality is derived mainly from taxes on the gaming tables of Monte Carlo, a town of less than 10,000 population at the base of the promontory from which the palace overlooks the sea.

Mountaintop Statelet Is San Marino.

Another sovereign state, which like the Vatican is surrounded by Italy, is the republic of San Marino. A fourteenth century stronghold atop Mount Titano extended its domain by purchase until now San Marino's 38 square miles sustain a population of almost 15,000. Less than a score of miles inland from Rimini on the eastern coast, the country is devoted largely to producing wine and raising cattle.

Liechtenstein, which seceded from the Holy Roman Empire in 1806, is the fourth smallest independent state, with an area of 65 square miles, less than the area of the District of Columbia. Situated on the old Swiss-Austrian border, this principality has a reigning family that dates back to the Twelfth century. The people, numbering a little more than 10,000, are engaged largely in agriculture, with some cotton, pottery and leather goods industries.

Fifth place in smallness is assigned to Andorra, with its 191 square miles in the Pyrenees between France and Spain. It has owed its independence largely to its mountainous character and its inaccessibility, until recently having but mule tracks through narrow mountain passes; armies found it easier to pass the Pyrenees near the sea ends.

Slovak Capital Regains Glory Of Past Years Bratislava Once Home Of Hungarian Diet and Royalty

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

When Slovakia's "Declaration of Independence" from Czechoslovakia was promulgated in Bratislava, the role of government fountainhead was not a new one to the city.

Bratislava, which was Pressburg before Czechoslovakia was born at Versailles, at the close of the World war, became the capital of all Hungary when the Turks, in a mad sweep across southeastern Europe, captured Buda—the prefix to Budapest—in 1541.

The ruins of the old Hungarian royal castle atop one of the city's hills, 275 feet above the Danube, recalls Bratislava's days as Hungary's first city. It continued to be the capital until about the time of the birth of the United States, when Emperor Joseph II restored Buda to its former dignity. Bratislava continued to be host to the Hungarian diet, however, until less than a century ago.

Important Trade Outlet.

The crownings of kings, and the meetings of diets have not, however, entirely absorbed the citizens of Bratislava. For about a thousand years the city has been one of the important trade outlets on the Danube, a sort of commercial funnel for grains from the fields of the hinterlands, and wines from grapes that cling to the nearby Little Carpathian hillsides.

Industrially, Bratislava has held high rank among central European cities of its size. A glance through its factory doors reveals in the making textiles, flour, iron products, leather goods, chemicals, explosives, paper, furniture and tobacco. These industries and many smaller ones keep the city's 124,000 people employed. About 40 per cent of the population is made up of Czechs and Slovaks, 28 per cent is German, and 22 per cent Magyar.

Palace Offers Excellent View.

The site of the old royal palace is a splendid grandstand from which to view Bratislava. Below, the town hall, Gothic cathedral, museum and Franciscan church—all products of the Thirteenth century—stand among modern business buildings rising above a touch of Paris: sidewalk cafes, numerous monuments, and fountain-studded public parks. The palace ruins themselves recall interesting tales. The edifice was burned in 1812, and one story has it that workmen caused the destruction because they grew tired of carrying supplies up the hill. Later, smugglers are reported to have used the ruins as a signal tower.

HOW TO SEW

Diagram your windows.

A READER living on a rural route in South Dakota writes me: "My parlor is 16 by 14 feet and has an 8 foot ceiling. Right in the center of the 16 foot wall are two windows, each 6 feet high and 3 feet wide. They are only 1 foot apart and 1 foot from the ceiling. How should I curtain these windows? Should the drapes cover the 1 foot space between them? How long should they be? Would you extend the drapes nearer the ceiling? I have been advised to do this.—S. A."

Important Trifle.—A pinch of salt added to hot starch will give a high glow.

Reviving Serge.—Blue serge suits can be revived by sponging with vinegar and water before they are pressed.

Renovating Shades.—A coat of flat oil paint will prolong the life of window shades.

To Clean Aluminum.—To clean aluminum kettles which have become discolored, rub them with a cloth dipped in lemon juice, then rinse in warm water.

Thinning Lacquer.—When using lacquer, never thin it with turpentine, benzine or linseed oil. Even a small trace of any of these liquids will ruin it. Use a commercial lacquer thinner instead.

The Study Room.—Shiny surfaces, such as a highly polished study table or desk, satin stripes in wallpaper, and glossy paint for woodwork, are hard on the eyes and should be avoided.

Scorched Linens.—To remove light scorches from linens, wet the stained area with cold water and expose it to the sun until the stain disappears.

TIPS to Gardeners

Proper Watering

EACH year, more and more gardeners are learning that gardens should not be watered by sprinkling.

Sprinkling usually moistens the surface soil only and thus the roots naturally come up there for water. When the root system is concentrated near the surface there is more danger of injury by hoeing; and if sprinkling is not done constantly, plants will be quickly affected by drought.

Considered from the time angle, moreover, sprinkling is impractical. Many hours can be wasted holding the hose and directing the spray. Time of watering is not of great importance, but it is usually considered more economical to water thoroughly early in the forenoon or late in the afternoon since the soil can then be thoroughly soaked with less loss from evaporation.

The most efficient method of watering, according to Walter H. Nixon, Ferry Seed Breeding Station vegetable expert, is to lay the hose on the ground. Do not have too heavy a flow of water, or there will be a washing of soil and exposure of roots. Let the water run slowly in one place for 20 minutes to half an hour. KEEP THE SUBSOIL MOIST.

5. No, length is always the longer dimension.
6. In the year 1793 the first U. S. coins were made.

New Transatlantic Airliner Service Closes Round-the-World Travel Gap

Yankee Clippers to Start Early in May Between New York, London

By SHELDON TAYLOR

GOT $1,785 and 14 days to spare?

Come vacation time and you'll be able to exchange that $1,785 for a one-way passage eastward around the world by air!

For only a few weeks hence, huge, 42-ton clipper ships will wing out of New York for Southampton, bridging the last remaining gap in round-the-world commercial aviation.

Twelve short years after Lindbergh crouched in the "Spirit of St. Louis," up to 40 passengers will stretch their legs in comfort, dine luxuriously and sleep in standard berths while the Atlantic surges several thousand feet below. It's Manhattan to Europe in 24 hours, arriving at Southampton in time to catch the Imperial Airways boat for Bombay, East Indies, Australia and all points east.

Boats Have Two Decks.

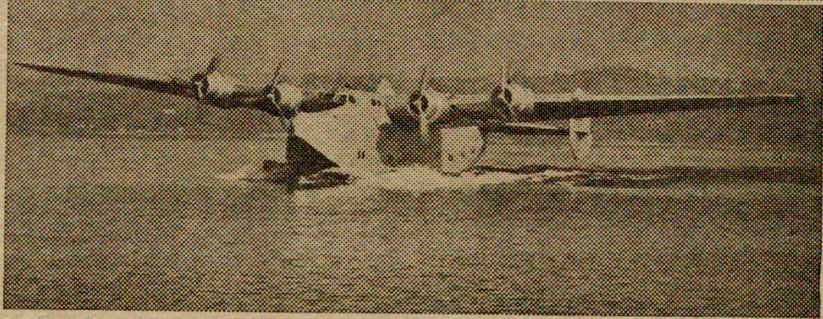

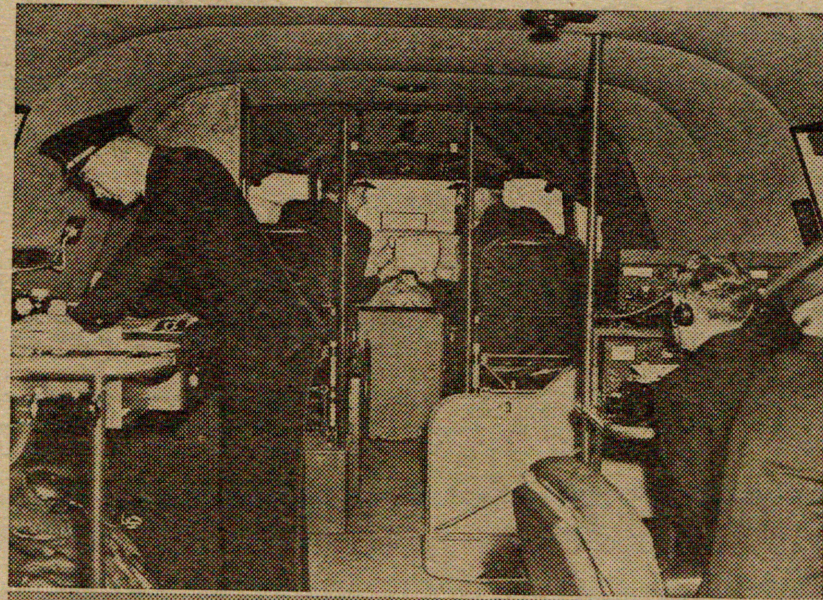

The new clippers can seat 74 passengers on short hops like New York to Bermuda, where service is already under way. But 40 is enough for transatlantic travel when you toss in gasoline, baggage and the unorthodox-sized crew of 10 which keeps this mechanical wonderbox operating from special quarters on the flight deck.

Clipper flying is an entirely new sensation, even for veteran air travelers. There's a unique atmosphere of spaciousness about it, comparable to moving from a hotel room to a seven-room house. Actually there are 10 compartments on the passenger deck, most of them for general living purposes and a few with special functions.

They start at the nose with a large compartment for stowing anchors, mooring apparatus and cargo. Next comes a large lounge, amazingly wide, followed by the steward's pantry where three men can work at once preparing meals for 80 people. Behind it is another large room, then a compartment which can be transformed into a dining room where passengers eat in three shifts, just like a threshing crew. Then follow three more passenger compartments, a ladies' dressing room and a lounge. Last—and most publicized of all—is the so-called "bridal suite" where anyone willing to pay the price may have complete privacy.

Pilots Have Easier Job.

Up on the flight deck are the most elaborate aeronautical laboratories ever placed between two wings. Two pilots sit in the ship's nose, but the instrument board on this flying Colossus is really much smaller than that of an ordinary land plane. Pilots maneuver their flying instruments and can glance at gauges showing the motor speed and manifold temperatures, but that's about all. At another desk sits the engineering officer who monopolizes the dials, keeping an hour-to-hour log and watching for trouble. He's not especially concerned if a motor "goes out," for the clipper can fly nicely with two while a mechanic is out in the wing fixing the third.

Radio man, navigating officer and captain make up the rest of the crew, and the captain has little to do but watch his 10 flight officers who work in shifts, repairing during off hours to their cabin behind the navigation room.

Two Routes Planned.

Transatlantic aviation, over a route so coveted that airmen have named it the "blue ribbon" line, hasn't been started by the simple procedure of building a boat and saying, "Let's go." There were other problems:

One was weather. Airships could fly very nicely from New York to Southampton via Newfoundland and Ireland during the summer, but another route was needed in the winter. The best bet was via the Azores and Lisbon, Portugal, a distance of 4,451 miles compared with 3,375 miles over the northern route.

To follow such a varied schedule it was necessary to expand existing weather services, a job the United States weather bureau has undertaken.

From spacious quarters on the flight deck, two pilots, engineer, navigation officer and radio officer operate the new Yankee Clipper, which is bigger than a seven-room house. A captain oversees the job, while the off-duty crew is relaxing in special quarters in the rear part of the flight deck.

en by soliciting western Atlantic reports twice a day from 20 to 40 ships.

An even greater obstacle was foreign competition. Pan-American entered a joint agreement with England's Imperial Airways to start two-way service simultaneously. But when Pan-American made ready to start this summer there came vague, unenthusiastic answers from London. Imperial's primary interest was establishment of direct England-to-Canada aviation before inaugurating England-to-U. S. travel. But American indignation reached such heights that Imperial agreed to let Pan-American start the service first, with the British company joining later this summer.

U. S. Subsidies Smaller.

Another problem was the financial handicap, under which American-owned airlines operate at a disadvantage to their foreign competitors. Should German, Spanish or Italian interests secure operating rights from Portugal, permitting them to use Lisbon and the Azores as a base, they could exert serious competition on the American company. Germany already has valuable airlines in Latin America and across the South Atlantic, and would be loathe to surrender supremacy. Complicating the danger is the direct government subsidy plan under which Italian and German airlines operate, compared with the airmail contracts on which American lines must depend for their subsidy.

In Pan-American's case, a $53,000 subsidy for mail is asked for each transatlantic trip this summer, making a lump federal contribution of $2,758,213 for the 52 junks planned.

One justification is that Pan-American has spent $1,500,000 developing the route. Another, far more important, is the place of ocean aviation in re-establishing America's maritime commerce. Last year the United States maritime commission, then headed by Joseph P. Kennedy, recommended that transatlantic aviation be developed as the best means of meeting foreign competition in this field.

Urge Passenger Planes.

For passenger travel the far-sighted commission urged a fleet of 18 flying boats like the new clipper, three flying daily, carrying the same total passenger capacity per year as a super liner. The planes would cost only $18,000,000 as against $50,000,000 for a super liner.

For its sponsors the new Atlantic service will culminate years of work which started when young Juan Trippe was graduated from Yale's Sheffield scientific school 19 years ago. More tangibly, it started when Trippe bought three "jennies," battered ships of World war vintage, and started the Long Island Airways. He was president, general manager and a good pilot, but bigger things were ahead. In 1926 he interested Vanderbilts, Whitneys and Rockefellers in formation of Colonial Airways, flying between Boston and New York as the first contract airmail route.

Anyone else but Trippe would whoop for joy when the first Yankee Clipper leaves Port Washington, Long Island, for Southampton during May. They'd whoop because a 10-year ambition was being realized. But Trippe won't say a word; he may make a speech, but his acquaintances know he can talk more and deliberately say less than anyone else in the airplane business. Maybe that's why the ambition came true.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Explodes Some False Notions About Food; Warns Homemakers Against Fallacies and Superstitions

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

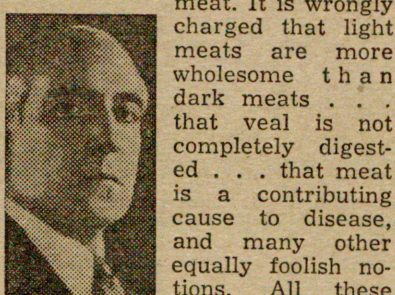

IT HAS been well said that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing. This is particularly true of dietary facts, for half-truths can be more misleading than lies.

There should be no place for half-truths, misinformation or superstition in a matter so vital as the choice of food. Yet judging from the letters that come to my desk, thousands of homemakers are being influenced, not by scientific knowledge, but by "old wives tales," and a multitude of fads and fancies which there is not a shred of scientific evidence to support.

Some food fallacies are harmless. Others may be detrimental to health. For they result in an unbalanced diet that deprives the body of substances needed to maintain physical efficiency at the highest possible level.

Misinformation About Meat

Many common and persistent fallacies concern the eating of meat. It is wrongly charged that light meats are more wholesome than dark meats . . . that veal is not completely digested . . . that meat is a contributing cause to disease, and many other equally foolish notions. All these misconceptions are in a class with the absurd ideas that eating turnips will make you brave, that lettuce is a cure for insomnia, or fish a food for the brain.

There is no evidence to support the belief that some meats are less desirable than others because they are less completely digested. Tests show that the length of time meat remains in the stomach varies with such factors as the quantity of fat present, the method of cooking, and the amount of chewing it receives. But there is no marked difference in the thoroughness with which the different kinds of meats are digested.

Erroneous Ideas About Cheese

Other fallacies that continually crop up in my mail are the ideas that cheese is constipating, and that this good food is not completely digestible. Neither belief is in accordance with the facts.

Numerous tests have shown that when cheese is given a proper place in the diet, it is usually well digested. Moreover, it has been demonstrated that there is practically no difference between cheese and meat with respect to ease of digestion.

As for the completeness with which this food is utilized by the body, studies made by investigators for the United States department of agriculture, demonstrated that on the average, about 95 per cent of the protein and over 95 per cent of the fat of cheese were digested and absorbed!

Some few persons may have an allergy to cheese just as they are sensitive to a variety of other protein foods. But that is an abnormal reaction and has no bearing on the use of cheese by persons in normal health.

Cheese Is Not Constipating

The mistaken idea that cheese is constipating doubtless arose from poor menu planning. Cheese is a highly concentrated food. It enjoys the distinction of being the most concentrated source of protein known. Because of this fact, menus containing cheese should be balanced by the inclusion of foods containing bulk or cellulose, such as fruits, vegetables or whole grain breads. When these foods are omitted, it is not the presence of cheese, but the absence of bulk that is responsible for the meal being insufficiently laxative.

Homemakers who have the interests of their families at heart will banish the notion that cheese is either constipating or difficult to digest when properly used. They will give this splendid food a regular place in their menus and thereby provide valuable nourishment at a most economical cost. It is doubtful if any other food provides such a variety of important nutrients concentrated in such a small space. Besides its fine quality protein, cheese is notable for its energy values, for supplying the minerals, calcium and phosphorus, needed for teeth and bones, and as a source of vitamin A.

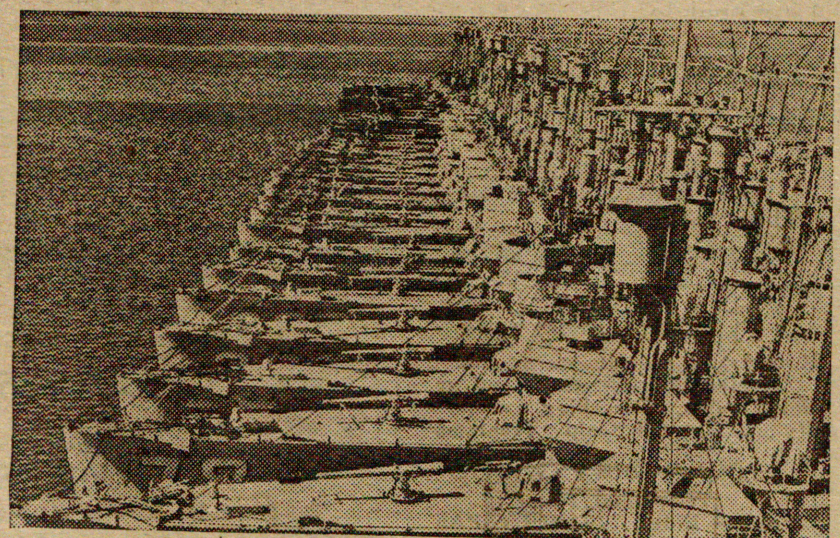

Not even milk has escaped a variety of groundless superstitions. It is said to be "fattening" when the truth of the matter is that no food is fattening unless consumed in excess of bodily needs. The food faddists say that fruits and milk must never be taken at the same meal, for the fruit acids will cause the milk to curdle. Here is an outstanding example of the misleading effect of half-truths. For it is a physiological fact that milk is always curdled in the stomach by the action of the hydrochloric acid!

Some people are afraid to eat acid-tasting fruits because they have the erroneous idea that they produce "acidity" in the body. In spite of their acid taste, however, most fruits have an alkaline reaction following digestion.

My earnest advice to homemakers is to disregard all such fads and fancies. Don't be guided by hearsay advice. Eat a wide variety of foods in moderation. Learn what constitutes a well-balanced diet. And make that your health ideal.

Destroyers Used in World War Resurrected from 'Graveyard'

SAN DIEGO.—"Red Lead Row," the graveyard of 48 United States navy destroyers which were decommissioned in 1922 following the Washington naval treaty, is teeming with life again. Behind locked gates, a crew of expert workmen under Capt. Byron McCandless is polishing up America's "ghost fleet."

Representing 55,000 tons of naval might, the destroyers—which were built during the World War—could almost double the nation's destroyer strength in event of a new conflict, providing 12 divisions of "over age" equipment which could sail to meet the enemy on a few hours' notice.

The boats are being renovated because the Washington treaty was practically scrapped following Japan's repudiation and Britain's determination to retain a 55,000-ton limit of light cruisers. So the red lead preservative paint, which gave "Red Lead Row" its name, has been scraped off and replaced with battleship gray.

Captain McCandless has a big job. Since 1922 the destroyer graveyard has been a supply source for skippers needing new valves, gears and other warship parts. When the reconditioning began workmen found the "tin cans" were in deplorable condition, many filled with sludge, needing new stacks, boilers, bearings and rigging.

Expert machinists, electricians, carpenters, gunners and torpedo men have changed all this, working under orders to fix all damage. When the reconditioned ships put to sea they will be slower than the streamlined destroyers of more recent vintage, nor will they have the destructive power. But naval experts claim they will be more valuable than many newer destroyers which have not been overhauled for a year or more.

One thing is certain, that the reconditioned ships will have all their signal flags, for Captain McCandless is the navy's No. 1 authority on the origin of flags. He exploded the Betsy Ross theory several years ago by producing evidence that Francis Hopkinson of New Jersey designed the first American flag.

Pattern No. 6242

You'll love these quaint motifs that make a hit wherever they're used! The appropriate mottoes (they come in pairs) make them unusual as towels and equally effective as small pictures or for pillow-tops. They're mainly in 10 to the inch cross-stitch with a bit of other simple stitchery to lend variety. They're fascinating to do.

INDIVIDUAL FREEDOM

"EVERYTHING that is really great and inspiring is created by the individual who can labor in freedom. Restriction is justified only in so far as it may be needed for the security of existence."—Dr. Albert Einstein.

SAFETY TALKS

The Careless Male

It appears that the male of the species is more careless than the female.

Of every 100,000 males in the United States, 119.6 were killed in accidents during 1937, reports the National Safety Council.

Only 51.3 of every 100,000 women suffered accident deaths.

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.

If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this crunchy toasted cereal every day—with milk or cream, or baked into muffins—drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Bandits Hold Up Filling Station Attendant

very slow in responding. Half an hour after she put in her call she received a call from the authorities asking for a description of the men and what had been stolen. In the meanwhile a state highway patrolman came to the station for a sandwich. Mrs. Price told him she just had been robbed a short time before and the patrolman was very much surprised as he had not heard of the holdup. A neighbor came in and when he learned that the hold-up had taken place, he said he had seen the car turn off the Lincoln highway going south on Spencer road. The state patrolman followed. Shortly afterward he picked up a radio broadcast that a filling station was being held up at Steger. Immediately he hurried over there and found that the same bandits had held-up and robbed a woman attendant in the gas station. Proceeding into Steger he spied the car of the bandits which he had been getting a description of. The car was parked near to a hotel. As he neared this hotel he saw the men get into the car and drive away. The patrolman went into the hotel and told the clerk what had happened, and asked whether the men were coming back. She said they had engaged a room and expected to return about midnight. The patrolman then asked her to call the state highway police at Joliet as soon as the men came in. She did so. Immediately afterward the state highway police arrived, surrounded the hotel and closed in on the bandits who were undressing to go to bed. There was a revolver on the dresser, but they made no resistance. It was discovered that the bandits were Walter Mancino, 21, and John Underwood, 22, both

Illinois Newspaper Men And Women At Short Course

Editor and Mrs. Semmler were among the 70 Illinois newspaper men and women to attend a short course of practicing journalists held in Chicago last Friday in the Sherman hotel. The program which was sponsored jointly by the Medill school of journalism of Northwestern University, School of Journalism of Illinois university and the Illinois Press association, included 42 topics of discussion and a series of round-table discussions and a number of speeches at general assembly. Speakers included Col. R. R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, Dr. Wm. L. Bailey, professor of Sociology Northwestern university; W. L. Schmitt, president of the Illinois Press association, and Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News. On Friday evening the annual banquet of the Illinois Press association was held in the Louis XVI room, Sherman hotel. Col. Knox was the speaker of the evening. A portion of the address, which was vital and interesting, was broadcast over the radio.

escaped convicts from Pontiac from where they had escaped last Friday night. Mancino was sentenced in 1936 on a burglary charge and Underwood was sentenced from Menard county, for burglary. Mancino was also accused of having made threats against the life of Assistant States Attorney Richard B. Austin of Cook county, who had prosecuted him. In addition to the $15 in cash taken from the Price gas station, the bandits also took a box of cigars and a carton of cigarettes. None of the loot was recovered. The police think the bandits spent most of the money to buy new clothes, a large assortment of which was found in the car.

Pure-Bred Cows Going to World's Fair

This photograph shows the partly completed building which will house the "Dairy World of Tomorrow" at the New York World's Fair in 1939. In it the five pure-bred associations—Ayrshire, Guernsey, Holstein-Friesian, Jersey and Brown-Swiss—will each have 30 outstanding specimens of their breed on display for the entire duration of the Fair. These animals, selected throughout the United States and Canada, are chosen for outstanding merit. They will be milked three times a day on a Rotolactor similar to the one developed at the Walker-Gordon Laboratories.

The exhibit will demonstrate the production and handling of milk under best sanitary conditions. The Borden Company is co-operating with the breed associations and will bear the expense of assembling, feeding and caring for the animals.
